

Determinants of Demand

Various factors influence the demand for a product or service. Some of the key determinants include the price of the product, consumer income, prices of related goods (substitutes and complements), consumer preferences, population demographics, and changes in consumer expectations. Demand analysis helps identify the relative importance of these determinants.

